The German Federal Government's Strategy

The German vocational education and training (VET) system is recognized as a successful model and brand throughout the world. The German Federal Government's one-stop strategy in the field of international VET cooperation aims to have a sustainable impact in the partner countries.

The establishment of an education policy dialogue with key stakeholders and the internationalization of initial and continuing vocational training are key components of this strategy. GOVET plays a major role as the German Government's central office for international VET cooperation.

Information, advice, networking – Make use of our services

GOVET is the German Government's central office for international VET cooperation at the Federal Institute for Vocational Education and Training (BIBB). As a key contact point, it provides guidance, information and advice as well as helping to network stakeholders in VET cooperation and pool their expertise. You too can profit from GOVET's fast, comprehensive and reliable services.

GOVET acts as the secretariat for the Round Table on International VET Cooperation. Members of the Round Table – ministries and other state authorities, organizations in the field of development cooperation, social partners and representatives from the education industry – meet regularly to discuss specialist issues, coordinate their work and exchange information on specific countries or topical issues. Various skills are brought together, enabling quick reactions. The German stakeholders present themselves as a single body in the partner countries, offer their services as a one-stop shop and create synergies. Stakeholders can raise their issues at the Round Table through GOVET.
